

CULTURE &gt; FOOD &amp; DRINK

The best private dining rooms in London

From Claridge's to Caviar Kaspia, here's our pick of the best restaurants for intimate dinners in the city

There's no shortage of excellent restaurants in London: whether you're looking for a pre-theatre bite, a romantic spot for date night or a convivial Italian to enjoy with friends, the capital has a seemingly never-ending array of choices. Sometimes, however, the average restaurant table just won't cut it. For special occasions – think landmark birthdays, anniversaries, hen dos or even weddings – only the most unique and memorable private dining rooms will do, and we've rounded up our absolute favourites to make your selection a little easier.

All of our choices have at least one thing in common: exceptional service that makes you feel genuinely cared for and pampered, whether you're lounging in a Soho basement (Dehesa is the spot-to-know) or hosting a summer lunch party in the bright and airy Spring at Somerset House. For unbridled luxury, there is the opulence of Caviar Kaspia's sumptuous private space and for classic elegance, the new intimate space at Claridge's has no parallel. And, when its cosy, warm and traditional you need, you can't do better than the gorgeous Westbourne Room at The Walmer Castle.

So read on for our edit of the most elegant private dining rooms in the city, and get ready to book your next soirée...

---

2

The Walmer Castle

THE WALMER CASTLE

Notting Hill's iconic pub got a glow up last year and is now one of the hottest spots in town. Its cosy and welcoming atmosphere is unbeatable and the design, courtesy of Isabella Worsley, is as divine as the delicious menu and the sumptuous cocktails (don't miss the margaritas). Perfect for anything from fun work meetings to stunning group dinners with family and friends, the Westbourne Room, cosseted away on the top floor, is the perfect choice.

Capacity: 20 seated

The Walmer Castle, 58 Ledbury Rd, London W11 2AJ

BOOK NOW