Private Parts: 18 London
Restaurants With Spectacular
Private Dining Rooms

If you're hunting for a cosy, exclusive spot for your next event, congratulations – you've landed in just the right place. We're about to let you in on some of London's best-kept secrets: hidden-away private dining rooms with buckets of character, fantastic food, and zero members of the general public. Whether you're planning a milestone birthday, a hen party, an anniversary, work do, or even a wedding, sometimes only the most unforgettable spaces will do.

Looks may not be everything (and excellent food trumps beauty any day) but when it comes to private dining rooms, a little aesthetic goes a long way. The right décor can transform even the dreaded office party into the social event of the year. Fortunately, London has private dining rooms that offer equal parts style and substance. Whether it's an intimate spot for a cosy dinner of ten, or a grand venue that comfortably seats over 80 (go big or go home, right?), these are London's finest private dining rooms, where impeccable service, stylish interiors, and complete privacy come together.

The Walmer Castle

Notting Hill's beloved pub had quite the makeover last year, transforming it into one of the most sought-after spots in town. The pub now has a refreshed, chic atmosphere, without losing its cosy charm that makes you feel right at home. Whether you're after a fun work lunch or a memorable dinner with friends or family, the Westbourne Room tucked away on the top floor is the perfect venue.

This intimate setting is ideal for group gatherings or private dinners. And the kitchen serves up a menu of both classic gastropub fare and dishes that are full of surprises. With historic roots, stylish interiors, and a menu that keeps things interesting, it's the place to be in Notting Hill right now – perfect for when you want comfort and sophistication in one place.
